

Finding a tutor can be stressful...

and that's without considering different package deals, specific learning needs, time zones, invoicing, rates, etc.

My name is Emory, and my goal as a tutor is to create an environment where students can feel comfortable talking about their needs and leave sessions feeling confident in their abilities.

I have worked with private tutoring companies and found time and time again, parents, tutors, and students, are not getting the most out of their experience. Companies that pride themselves of hiring the best of the best and matching tutors with students, are also guilty of:

● taking an 80% (or more) cut of amount paid by customer, leaving tutors' income at the remaining 20% or less.

● setting a minimum time for scheduling (i.e. minimum of two hour sessions, when a student might only need one hour, or can't afford two).

● overcharging for cancellation fees.

With my tutoring, you can expect consistent help with algebra 1 and 2, SAT and ACT prep, writing assistance for k-12 and...

● no cancellation fees, ever

● no rate change, ever, I'll only ever charge one hourly rate

I graduated magna cum laude, am currently attending the University of Oxford for my Masters, and Berkeley Law in 2025 for my law degree. Scan the QR code to learn more!
